LBC Research Statement

For over 30 years, Lubee has been working with the world's top agencies and universities to study bats and human health. Partners include CDC, NIH, NIAID, EcoHealth Alliance, and others, many of which employ virologists and epidemiologists working on the front lines of viral research including the coronavirus pandemic. Lubee is currently providing guidance and assistance to some of these agencies regarding bat health and immunology, a better understanding of which leads to a greater understanding of human health.

Please support our organization and the work we do with national and international research partners.
